4. Institutional Objectives and Strategy for Research and Innovation

The National and Kapodistrian University of Athens displays extensive research activity, increased participation in European projects, international networks and collaborations with public and private sectors. For this purpose, the University either employs or cooperates with distinguished researchers. The University's research policy is interconnected with its educational mission and aims at strengthening research through creative collaborations with leading research institutes, government agencies and consortia around the world. NKUA focuses on the quality of the results produced in all scientific fields and is inextricably linked to a policy of both group and individual excellence, rewarding excellence in individual performance, the creation of new research teams and the cultivation of a positive environment that promotes innovation. It also encourages interdisciplinary research that promotes scientific knowledge for the benefit of society as a whole. The Educational process in itself contributes highly - at the postgraduate level primarily- to the development of research in particular by training young researchers. The research policy of NKUA is characterized by the following main objectives: a) the development of the necessary skills, most notably for postgraduate students, who - as part of their studies - become familiar with research activities in laboratories and clinics (in the case of Medical School) and / or participate in conferences, publications in international journals, etc., b) the participation of doctoral candidates, postdoctoral researchers and professors of the University in research programs of esteemed scientific panels in collaboration with researchers from institutions both in Greece and abroad c) the promotion and development of the research activity of the Departments/Faculties, which comprise, among others, the organization of seminars and conferences, the implementation of research programs, the presentation of research output in conferences, the publication of articles in scientific journals, the writing of books, monographs, chapters in collective volumes, etc., d) the promotion of interdisciplinary knowledge as well as the fulfillment of the country's own research, social, cultural and developmental goals, e) the recognition, mapping and exploitation of the results of the research carried out in the NKUA, the protection of intellectual property by obtaining patents, etc. In the academic year 2019-20, the Center for Research, Innovation and Entrepreneurship was founded under the name "Archimedes" and started operations aspiring to connect the research community with the industry and business sectors thus linking the innovative thinking of University research to the entrepreneurial community, helping the creation of start-ups and such.

5. Research funding and employment opportunities

The Special Account for Research Grands (SARG) is responsible for the management of research funds from the projects undertaken by the members of the academic community. The main sources of research funding of NKUA are:

- the European and international programmes,
- the Corporate Pact for the Development Framework,
- collaborations with public and private sector bodies,
- the provision of scientific services to legal and natural persons,
- sponsorships and
- donations.

It is worth mentioning that, during the economic crisis in Greece, the resources for research and development programs that the University attracted were six times higher than those of the state subsidy for the operating costs of education. These resources not only allowed the University to maintain and improve the quality of studies during this critical period, but also have considerable liquidity for conducting research and still maintain reserves for development investments. In the last three years, the average annual funding for research and development projects NKUA Professors undertake, exceeded 90 million Euros. It is broken down by source of funding in accordance with Figure 1 below.

SARG's annual revenue from projects/programmes by source of funding in million Euros over the period 2015-2022

Today, the SARG of the NKUA manages approximately 4.000 active projects and the number of new projects per year is reflected in Figure 2 below.

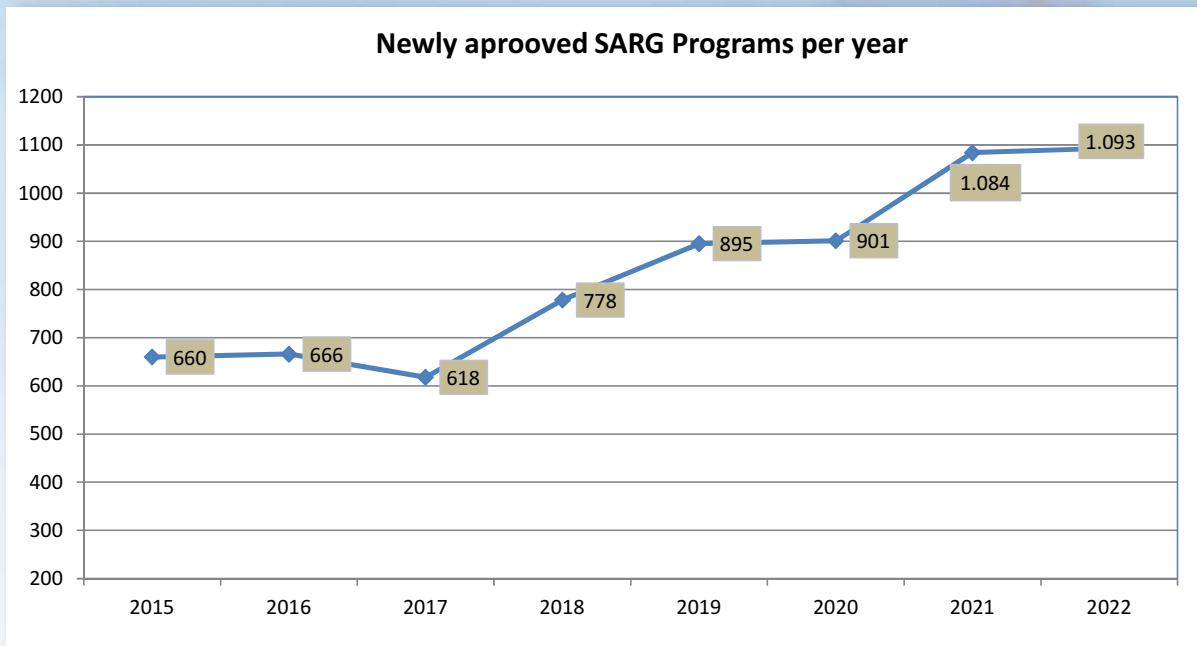

Figure 2:

Following is a diagram with the total number of projects managed over the years by the SARG of NKUA is depicted in Figure 3.

Number of projects per year

The research projects implemented in the N.K.U.A. through S.A.R.G., employ 5,000 to 9,000 researchers annually, who in addition to the Professors, serving Lecturers and other permanent staff of the Foundation can also be young scientists such as PhD candidates, postdoctoral, young researchers, scientific, technical and other staff. As far as the funds for research and development projects are concerned, a decisive contribution has been made to the development of research, the strengthening of the profile of the Foundation, the reduction of unemployment among young scientists and the halting of brain-drain. Employment figures in projects/programmes for the last eight years are reflected in Figure 4.

6. Funding provided by SARG for projects and support of new faculty members

In the context of allocating SARG's annual revenue, the Research Committee submits its recommendations to the competent body of the University seeking to introduce and fund projects that aim to: i) support SARG's own administrative and managerial needs, the communication and dissemination of the outputs achieved, the upgrade of its systems as well as the improvement of its internal procedures and all infrastructure and resources, ii) support the University with its operating cost so as to effectively fulfill its mission iii) develop and support education and research within every Academic Unit of the University, iv) support the University Library and other services, vital for research and education, v) adhere to safety standards and maintain proper hygienic conditions in both classrooms and research space, vi) cover the travelling and accommodation expenses for faculty members and their associates, so as to present their work at international scientific conferences and also publication cost for papers to appear in international scientific journals, vii) develop interdisciplinary research and related infrastructure, ix) support and cater for the needs of newly appointed professors, ix) support new scientists and staff through providing funding for awards that promote educational and research activities, x) vest and safeguard the patents the University holds as well as capitalize upon scientific knowledge and research outputs to the University's benefit and xi) all other requirements the Senate deems necessary for the development of the Institution.
